

Larry Malone is a Special Projects Coordinator for the W.Va. National Guard and is owner of Malone Consulting & Strategies. Malone has nearly 30 years of experience in all facets of communications, public affairs, marketing and digital services.

Prior to joining the National Guard Malone served for two years as the Director of Policy for Governor Earl Ray Tomblin. His background also includes being a corporate communications manager, a national public relations agency executive, a state trade association leader, an elected city official and a technology entrepreneur. Malone has worked for clients in Boston, Houston, St. Louis, San Francisco and throughout the Mid-Atlantic region.

Malone served for several years as Chairman of the West Virginia Broadband Connectivity Working Group – a joint study project of the West Virginia Chamber of Commerce and Vision Shared. He also served as project manager of the West Virginia Small Business Technology Education & Competitiveness Initiative, was a member of the Affiliate Leadership Council of the West Virginia High Technology Consortium Foundation and is a founding member of the West Virginia Telehealth Alliance.

He currently is serving as project manager for two statewide workforce studies – one on coding and one on cybersecurity.